Welcome to the Federal Work-Study Program!

The Federal Work-Study Office wishes you great success this academic year. This manual serves as your guide to how the Federal Work-Study Program (FWS) functions at Ohio State, and explains your rights and responsibilities as a student employee within the program. Whether this is your first time using work-study at Ohio State or you are a work-study pro, it is always a good idea to read through the manual at the start of every year.

If you have any questions for the Federal Work-Study Office, contact us via email at sfa-jobs@osu.edu or ask a specialist at Buckeye Link.

How work study works

Federal Work-Study (FWS) is a form of employment as well as federal financial aid, and like other forms of financial aid, it is offered based on the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). FWS needs to be accepted in your Aid Summary and is available provided that you are enrolled at least half-time. But unlike other forms of financial aid (scholarships, grants, and loans) FWS does not pay your tuition or housing charges directly. As you work, you will receive bi-weekly paychecks that may be used to cover your daily incidental expenses. A work-study offer is not a guaranteed job. You need to search, apply and interview for a position to gain access to your FWS offer.

One perk of being a work-study student is that your employer knows you are a student first and an employee second. That's not to say that you are allowed to study while at work. When you're on the clock you should embody professionalism, Buckeye style! Leave your phone in your backpack, be punctual and focus on the task at hand. Employers know that students are not permitted to work during scheduled class times and that you cannot work more than 20 hours a week. They also know to be flexible during exams and that you may not be available to work during academic breaks.

Important things to know

- You cannot work when you are scheduled to be in class, including online classes.
- You can work up to 20 hours a week and be paid with work-study funds.
- You must be enrolled at least half time in order to earn work-study funds.
- You must work for the hours you are paid.
- Work-study funds do not pay tuition or housing charges directly.
- Receipt of work-study funding is contingent upon meeting financial aid and enrollment criteria, therefore should not be used as a sole source of income.

Once hired, you receive a bi-weekly paycheck that can be used for anything you need. Your employer uses your work-study funds to pay you, so it decreases gradually as you work over the course of the year. You can monitor your balance in your Aid Summary tab.

The opportunities

Work-study employment opportunities are available on and off campus. On-campus jobs permit the most flexibility and allow you to network on campus. Off-campus opportunities with our approved non-profit agencies allow you to network with the larger local community, apply what you're learning in the classroom and make a bigger impact. Some work opportunities will require that you be present in a physical location, while others are telework opportunities that can be performed from home.

Process Overview

Applying for positions

1) Accept your FWS offer

The very first step is to accept the FWS offer from your Aid Summary, and allow one business day before starting your job search. Accepting your FWS offer places a 'FWS Eligible' flag on your internal Ohio State job applications in Workday, and that's how departments will know that you are a work-study student. Outstanding verification or appeal items on your To Do List will prevent the flag from being checked. You can still search and apply for FWS positions, but when departments filter applicants by the FWS eligible flag, you will not appear as eligible until those processes are complete.

FWS Eligibility Flag

- Accept your FWS offer each academic year.
- Meet all financial aid criteria
- Complete all verification items on To Do List
- Enrolled at least half time

2) Start your job search in Workday

Next, you will log into Workday from the FWS website. You can locate the Career application by clicking the View All Apps section on the Home Page, or navigating to the menu in the upper left corner. From the Careers app you can search FWS positions by clicking on Search Student Federal Work Study Jobs. You may also search all student job openings by clicking on Search Student Jobs, although not all of those positions are FWS-eligible. There is an Applying for Student Jobs job aid to help you navigate that process if you need help. You can also search and apply for non-FWS jobs, but please note this means the department will be paying you themselves instead of using your work-study funds.

3) Apply and interview

Once you've found a job you're interested in, follow the application instructions carefully before taking steps to apply, as each department handles hiring differently. Be sure to attach any supplemental application materials notated on job posts to your Career profile before you apply, as you cannot add documents to an application later. Once you apply, it is customary to allow a minimum of two weeks for hiring managers to review applications. Please be prepared to share proof of your accepted FWS funds during the interview (even if you have not been asked for this) as only you can share that FERPA protected information with a potential employer.

4) The hiring process

So, you applied for a few positions, heard back from a few supervisors through your Ohio State email account, scheduled (and crushed) your interviews, and have been offered a position. Congratulations, it's time for the hiring process to start! The entire hiring process occurs within Workday. All student employees go through the same hiring process steps, and the Talent Acquisitions staff, HR consultant, and supervisor for the job you applied for will help if you have questions along the way.

The process from offer to schedule:

1. Email sent to your Ohio State email address to log into Workday and Sign Offer Letter
2. Right after you sign your letter, two tasks will appear on your candidate home page:
 - a. Documentation of Date of Birth
 - b. Documentation of National Identification (Social Security Number)
3. If a background check is required, you will receive an email from HR with instructions.
4. After your background check is cleared, you will receive a welcome email if you are a new Ohio State employee and Workday Notification to complete your onboarding tasks, such as taxes, policy, and procedure forms.

5. Once all onboarding tasks are complete, your supervisor can schedule you to start work!

It is important that you monitor your Workday candidate home page for tasks, and your Ohio State email for notifications.

If action is not taken quickly, you may have to start the hiring process over again, significantly delaying your start date.

For off-campus, nonprofit employers who don't have access to Ohio State systems, the FWS office handles the interactions with HR that an Ohio State supervisor normally would, and additional paperwork may be required. If you've interviewed with an off-campus employer and you're not sure where you are in the hiring process, you can contact the FWS office at sfa-jobs@osu.edu.

Background checks are necessary in most cases and can take from 2 to 14 days to complete; some employers require additional checks that can take longer. If required, you CANNOT begin work or volunteer until the results of a background check is in.

Once your Offer Letter is signed, you have supplied your bio-demographic information, and your background check results are in, you will receive notification from HR letting you know that the hiring process is now complete, and what your start date will be. Your supervisor will then help you with on-boarding, which includes guidance on how to submit timesheets, request time off, set up direct deposit and more. Once on-boarding is complete, your supervisor can schedule you to start work. Questions about the hire process, start dates, or new hire concerns should initially be shared with your supervisor, but if you're not sure who to turn to, you can contact HR Connection at hrconnection@osu.edu.

Paperwork and background checks

Students cannot begin working until HR has received and processed all necessary documentation.

For rehired students, this occurs annually.

Getting paid

Work-study students are paid bi-weekly. A Payroll Calendar and instructions on how to submit your time will be included when your manager guides you through the onboarding process.

Additionally, resources to locate most basic employee information can be found on our Student Resources page.

Students are responsible for submitting their timesheets online at the end of every week. Once submitted, it is your supervisor's responsibility to review and approve your timesheets on time.

Remember...

Submit on time every week = paid on time!

Rehire Pro Tip

Are you being rehired? Has it been more than 90 days since your last paycheck?

Double check your direct deposit and address are correct on your Workday profile!

Your FWS earnings are taxable by the IRS, but those earnings are FICA exempt and are not counted against your need-based aid eligibility for that tax year's FAFSA. You can view your tax withholdings on your paycheck, review your W-2's and direct deposit information in Workday. Information regarding paystubs, W-2's and direct deposit can also be found through Workday, and you may direct questions to hrconnection@osu.edu

Timesheet falsification

Timesheet falsification is time recorded on your timesheet that you did not actually work. Timesheet falsification is a crime. Any student who falsifies hours worked will be referred to the appropriate campus authority for investigation and possible criminal prosecution. Students who have been proven to have engaged in such conduct may expect serious consequences, including termination from the Federal Work-Study Program.

Financial aid requirements

With all that it takes to get a job and start working, it's easy to forget that work-study is a form of federal financial aid. To be eligible for your funding when you begin working you need to be meeting a few federal financial aid eligibility requirements.

First, you must be enrolled a minimum of half-time (6 credit hours for undergraduates, 4 credit hours for graduate students), and be meeting Satisfactory Academic Progress standards.

You cannot apply for a FWS position during a term in which you are not meeting enrollment

To be hired and paid with FWS funds

- You must have an accepted your FWS Offer for the current academic year
- Be enrolled a minimum of half-time (6 credit hours for undergraduates, four credit hours for graduate students.)
- Be meeting all financial aid criteria
- No outstanding verification or appeal items on your To Do List

minimums or are otherwise not eligible. Remember, potential employers may want to hire you, but they will not be able to pay you using work-study funds if you aren't meeting requirements.

You must be meeting all requirements for financial aid eligibility to work, including:

Enrollment Requirements: You must maintain at least half-time enrollment at Ohio State (6 hours for undergraduates, 4 hours for graduate students). If you graduate, withdraw, are dismissed from the university, or drop below half-time enrollment at any point in the term, you immediately cease to be eligible to earn work-study funding. You will be able to begin earning FWS funds again only if you enroll at least half-time for a subsequent term. Online classes offered through campus based programs count as work-study eligible, however programs where all coursework is 100% online for the entire length of the program are not.

Consortium agreements

If you are attending another institution under a consortium agreement, you will not be able to earn FWS funds unless you are also enrolled at least half-time through an Ohio State University campus.

If you need to make schedule adjustments while you are employed, it's wise to add classes first, then drop the ones you no longer wish to be enrolled in. This will help you to avoid an under-enrollment situation that may problematize funding.

There may be times when it is academically or personally necessary to drop below half time when employed in a work-study position. Please discuss this with your employer to see if they have other funding sources to pay you with while under-enrolled.

Satisfactory Academic Progress: Work-study students must be meeting Satisfactory Academic Progress (SAP) requirements. Should you no longer be meeting SAP, you immediately cease to be eligible to earn work-study funding. If you submit a SAP appeal and it is approved, your work-study eligibility is contingent upon meeting the conditional requirements of the appeal while you are on probationary status. For those students who do not appeal, you may regain access to work-study funds if you self-correct at the end of a semester. For more information on the SAP appeal process, contact Buckeye Link.

Verification: Federal regulations dictate that Ohio State ensures all students are eligible for the financial aid they are receiving. Ohio State may request verification from students and families of what was entered on the FAFSA to determine if a student is eligible for need based aid. If you are selected for verification, you cannot use FWS funds until you complete outstanding verification items in your To Do List. This is because we cannot confirm nor deny your eligibility for need based financial aid during this process. Once the verification and/or appeal process is complete, you can return to work provided you are still meeting the need-based component for the FWS aid offer.

Getting work-study next year

Because need-based aid is contingent upon the FAFSA being filed each year, student eligibility is reassessed annually, and you cannot assume you will automatically receive the same financial aid package from one academic year to the next. For information on how to apply for aid next year go to sfa.osu.edu.

Tips to improve the likelihood of getting work-study next year:

- File the FAFSA by the priority date, and submit verification items on time
- Earn a portion of this year's work-study offer
- Meet all federal eligibility criteria to receive federal financial aid

Work hour and funding limits

Limited funds

Federal Work-Study funds are limited in two ways:

1. Because FWS funds are tied to enrollment and the academic year, you have a limited time to secure employment and use the funds. Unused funds will not roll over to the next academic year, nor can they be "cashed out." For this reason, offers can be canceled for students who do not begin using them by the start of spring semester so that we can further support those actively participating in the program.
2. The amount we have available to allocate each year is limited. To ensure we can offer funding to as many students as possible, Ohio State offers each student a conservative $2,000 per semester ($1,500 for summer). If you are using work-study funds and are within $500 of running out, please contact Buckeye Link or sfa-jobs@osu.edu to see if we can increase your FWS offer. We cannot promise funds will be available and not all students are eligible for increases due to financial aid restrictions, but we would like to review your case. If you are not eligible for additional need-based aid, we recommend that you discuss the issue with your supervisor to see if any other funding sources are an option.

Wait... how much can I earn per term?

Your enrollment per term is used to determine how much overall FWS you are eligible for, typically $2,000/term ($1,833 if you are also enrolled summer). However, you aren't limited to earning just $2,000/term. You could earn all $4000 in one term if you work enough hours at a high pay rate.

Calculating how best to use your funds

Since funds are not designed to carry a student to the end of the year, you and your employer will want to calculate how far your FWS offer will stretch based on pay rate and hours worked and discuss what can be done departmentally should you run out of funding. You can use the following formula:

- FWS offer amount divided by pay rate = total hours of FWS you have.
 - Example: $4000/$13.00 = 307 hours
- Total hours divided by hours per week (cannot exceed 20) = Weeks the offer will stretch.
 - Example: 307/20 = 15.35 weeks

Or

- Total hours divided by weeks in a semester (typically 16) = Average hours per week.
 - Example: 307/16 = 19 hours per week

In this example, this student has enough funding to work 19 hours per week for a little less than one semester. If the student were to work 10 hours a week, the FWS offer is more likely to cover 30 weeks, which is almost two semesters.

Maximum hours allowed to work and holding multiple positions

Because you are a student first and an employee second, there are policies in place that limit the number of hours you can work for the university and be paid with work-study funds. You may be paid from Federal Work-Study funds for no more than 20 hours per week. If you also work at a non-FWS job on campus, the university imposes additional restrictions on the number of hours you may work to 28 hours a week; bear in mind, only 20 of those hours can be paid using work-study funds. If both positions are FWS, the combined hours between the two positions cannot exceed 20 hours a week. For more information, see section III.A.2. of the university's student employment policy at:

hr.osu.edu/public/documents/policy/policy1010.pdf?t=201463104327.

When entering time in the Workday time tracking system for a work-study position, the hours worked earliest in the week will apply to the FWS funds first. You will receive an alert if you've entered more than 20 hours combined between all FWS employers, and the rest of the hours will be paid by your employer(s). Supervisors can see hours you have submitted in the time tracking system for other positions (depending on when they were submitted) and will receive the same alerts that you do when approving your time.

Typically, it is the supervisor's responsibility to monitor the hours a work-study student is scheduled to work, but if you're holding multiple positions, you'll need to inform them of any additional work schedules you may be expected to adhere to. If you exceed the 20 hour allotment regularly, that overage will be funded by your department instead of from work-study funds, which can be an expensive mistake for your employer. If you are repeatedly miscalculating your combined hours, your employer(s) may have to terminate your position or ask that you choose just one employer.

Additionally, work-study funding can only be applied to hours worked for the current pay period and one additional pay period back in time. Timesheets that are submitted or approved for hours worked more than one pay period back in time are charged to the employing department, which can also be an expensive mistake for your employer. If you are habitually submitting timesheets late, this could also result in a reprimand from your employer, or termination. Plus, it will be hard for you to know how much funding you have available since that data can only be as good as your most recently processed paycheck.

Finally, there is a practicality component to consider. There is nothing preventing students from holding multiple positions, however It's important to highlight that working more than one FWS-only job doesn't necessarily mean you will make more money. Because work-study fund increases are not guaranteed, holding multiple FWS positions could result in earning all your funding faster than expected, because two (or more) departments will be drawing on your funds at the same time each pay period. This strategy works best if you know that you'll only be working a small amount of time with each employer and are largely doing so for experience or networking (as opposed to the paycheck itself), or that at least one of the employers can keep you employed once your funds run out.

Breaks and holidays: working “off term”

Work during breaks and university observed holidays

You may be permitted to work more hours during breaks by the FWS Office if funds are available and if your employer has work for you to do. You and your employer will be notified via email in advance of each break whether work will be permitted. The hour limit per week typically increases to 38 hours a week during winter and spring break. Hours usually are not increased during university observed holidays or the break period in autumn. Students who work during a university observed holiday or breaks are paid their regular, hourly rate. You are not required to work over breaks and university observed holidays. In some cases, the office or off-campus agency you work for may be closed, so working may not be an option.

Working during summer

At Ohio State, FWS eligibility is tied to a student's current enrollment. Summer term is the start of Ohio State's academic year. You can use FWS during summer provided you are offered FWS for the new academic year and are fulfilling the same financial aid and enrollment eligibility criteria required in autumn or spring semesters.

Any combination of summer 12-week term, 8-week, 6-week and 4-week sessions can be used to meet the 6 credit hour minimum enrollment requirement during summer term. Online classes offered through campus based programs count as FWS eligible, however programs where all coursework is 100% online are not. Be advised that the workload for summer courses can be heavy due to the truncated nature of the courses. A student can begin working in summer when all HR steps for hire/rehire have been completed. It bears repeating, students that drop below half time at any point in the term immediately cease to be eligible to earn work-study funds. If you find you cannot handle the accelerated summer course load and will be dropping below half time, it is wise to discuss with your supervisor whether other funding options are available.

Using FWS during the summer also extends the time in which to earn your offer which means you could exhaust your offer sooner than anticipated due to having more time available to use the funds. While we can review student accounts when they have reached a FWS balance of $500 or less, we cannot promise that we will be able to increase existing offers.

Sometimes taking classes in summer simply to have access to a work-study job is not a good option big-picture. We would strongly suggest any student who relies on need-based aid to pay fees discuss with a Buckeye Link counselor whether attending in summer will impact any of the other aid offers in their financial aid package. If you then determine attending classes in summer is not a good option for you from a financial aid standpoint, you may review the job opportunities for summer employment available to all students on our general job board, Ohio State Handshake, and search the regular wage positions on the Workday job board.

Probation and different types of termination

Seasonal, voluntary, and involuntary termination

Because we cannot confirm or deny a student's financial aid eligibility for a future academic year, some departments may need to terminate work-study positions at the end of spring semester, and then rehire those employees the following academic year when they regain FWS eligibility. This is referred to as seasonal release or seasonal termination. This does not mean you are not allowed to work in the same position each year—in fact, we hope you do! But because we can't promise you will be offered work-study each year you may need to go through the hiring process again annually. Each department handles this transition a little differently. Please discuss this annual transition with your supervisor.

Students who graduate in the middle of an academic year also fall into this seasonal category. They can expect their last day to earn work-study funds to be the last day of the semester that they graduate. The Federal Work-Study Calendar lists the last day graduating students can work.

Voluntary release is initiated by the student and can happen any time during the semester for a variety of reasons. You may discover that your ability to be successful in the classroom is being compromised by your work responsibilities. Or maybe you would like to quit one position to work a different one. Regardless of the reason, it is professional courtesy to provide your supervisor with two weeks' notice, verbal and in writing if you would like to quit your position. Your supervisor will work with HR to update your hire record. Please note, your employer does not have the authority to refuse to release you from your work commitment.

Involuntary termination is when the employer initiates termination for reasons other than the temporary or seasonal nature of the position. Depending upon the circumstances of the termination, there may be ramifications to your work-study eligibility.

Here is a sample of reasons your employer may choose to terminate employment:

- The department does not have sufficient work.
- The department wishes to eliminate a job.
- The student's work, responsiveness, and/or attendance is unsatisfactory.
- The student has violated the Student Code of Conduct.

Federal Work-Study probation

Students who have been dismissed from their FWS employment for poor performance or attendance issues may seek another FWS job but will receive a written warning from Student Financial Aid that they have been placed on FWS probation. If a student is subsequently dismissed from another FWS job, that student will not be able to participate in the program for the remainder of the academic year.

Student Financial Aid will refer any allegations of FWS misconduct to the appropriate university office for investigation. Students found in violation of the Student Code of Conduct may lose eligibility for FWS funds and notification will be sent to the student in writing.

Students who are dismissed from their FWS employment for misconduct (falsification of time records; misuse of confidential or privileged information; misuse, misappropriation, or theft of university property; acts of racial discrimination or sexual misconduct; or other serious infractions of The Ohio State University Code of Student Conduct) may lose eligibility to participate in FWS.

Students whose FWS eligibility is canceled will be eligible to receive Federal Direct Loans up to the program maximums for their level of enrollment or up to the student's eligibility.

Inappropriate activity

Any student who misuses university equipment or supplies, or commits any serious infraction of the Code of Student Conduct will be subject to disciplinary action by the appropriate campus authority. Students who have been proven to have engaged in such conduct may expect serious consequences, including termination from the Federal Work-Study Program. If as a student employee, you witness inappropriate activity that you do not feel comfortable bringing to the attention of your direct supervisor, you may contact sfa-jobs@osu.edu.

Sexual misconduct

The university maintains an environment for work and study free from sexual misconduct. You are encouraged to report concerns or complaints, regardless of whether you work on or off campus. Prompt corrective measures will be taken to stop sexual misconduct whenever it occurs. The Non-Discrimination, Harassment, and Sexual Misconduct Policy can be found at <https://policies.osu.edu/assets/policies/Policy-NDH-Sexual-Misconduct.pdf> . Reports of sexual misconduct can be filed with the Title IX Compliance Coordinator: titleix.osu.edu/ .

We value our hardest working Buckeyes!

The Federal Work Study Program is designed to support our students as they embark on their educational and professional journeys. We strive to provide the professional development, networking opportunities and real-world experience our students need to be successful as they graduate and become our future leaders. In return, the enthusiasm, energy, and talent of our students make The Ohio State University an enriching and unparalleled place to learn and grow. Buckeye Nation is strong in part because it is a reflection of the people that work here... and that includes you, the student employee!

We know that holding down a job while taking classes can be demanding. We know there are late nights, long days and so much to learn. We know this is new territory, that you are up for the challenge, and that you will thrive here. We know this because as your supervisors and mentors we witness daily how hard you work and appreciate you as fellow staff members. You inspire us, and we can't wait to work alongside you!
