

Late Timesheet Policy and Student Agreement

As a work-study employee, you must follow University policies and procedures. Outlined below are the requirements for timesheet submission when working off-campus.

Late Timesheet Policy

Students are to submit timesheets on the last day worked of each pay period. Anything after this will be considered late. Students are given two (2) passes on late timesheets; the third may be grounds for termination.

Supervisors are to forward approval for timesheets to ESUE-timesheets@osu.edu no later than the Monday following the end of each pay period. Anything after this will be considered late. Supervisors are given two (2) passes on late timesheets; the third may be grounds for termination of work-study agreement which will result in the student being terminated from his/her appointment.

Notes:

- Submitting a timesheet two pay periods late will count as “2 Lates”
- Submitting a timesheet three or more pay periods late may result in immediate termination
- Semester Breaks (spring break, winter break, summer break, etc.) are not an exception to the late timesheet policy
- Best practice is to submit and approve timesheets at the end of each week

Justification for late timesheets

Students must include an explanation of why their timesheet is late in the email they forward to their supervisor. The supervisor will forward the email to ESUE-timesheets@osu.edu so the timesheet can be entered and the justification documented. Justifying late timesheets is not an excuse for turning them in late, but is simply a way for us to understand the problem and attempt to find a solution.
